Introduction
Animal-Assisted Therapy (AAT) is a form of creative therapy that utilizes licensed and credentialed therapy animals and handlers (people who manage the animal) to provide goal-directed interventions to individuals of all ages. AAT can be used with various types of psychological, emotional, developmental, cognitive, motivational, or physical impairments. Dr. Abbate and her dog, Peanut, have been providing AAT as a licensed and credentialed therapy dog team since 2007. The purpose of this form is to review the policies, procedures, and risks of working with a therapy dog, as well as request your consent for treatment utilizing AAT provided by Dr. Abbate and Peanut. Please note that this form upholds the agreement of procedural and financial terms as stated in the Consent for Psychological Treatment.

Policies, Procedures, and Risks for Working with Animals in Therapy
Although working with animals, specifically canines, in a therapeutic setting has many benefits, there are risks associated with the intervention. Because AAT utilizes a live animal, it is important to note in advance the policies and procedures needed to maximize the intervention and ensure a safe work environment, both for Peanut and the patient.

1. Participation in AAT is not guaranteed and will be based on Dr. Abbate’s assessment. If the assessment determines the patient is not a good fit, other treatment options will be discussed and appropriate referrals may be made a. If a history or indication of animal abuse or other risk factors are present, Dr. Abbate will determine whether participation in AAT is indicated
   b. Should a patient become aggressive (hits, kicks, bites, pulls, pinches, etc.) towards Peanut during therapy, Dr. Abbate will determine if it is appropriate to continue treatment or make the appropriate referrals
2. Anyone wishing to participate in AAT should be screened for allergies before working with Peanut. All allergies must be reported before beginning treatment so the proper precautionary measures can be taken. Should documentation from a medical professional indicate that allergies, skin or respiratory sensitivities, or other medical conditions exist, Dr. Abbate will determine if it is appropriate to continue treatment or make the appropriate referrals. Neither Dr. Abbate, nor the Melmed Center can be held liable for allergic or other physiological reactions to Peanut
3. Any fear of dogs must be reported before treatment commences so the proper precautionary measures can be taken and goodness of fit determined
4. If sick or injured, Peanut will not be able to provide services until the illness or injury subsides or upon veterinary approval, as sickness or injury could negatively impact the animal’s behavior
5. Although Peanut will remain current on her vaccinations and health screenings, there is always a slight risk of zoonotic disease transmission (i.e., the sharing of diseases between animals and humans) when working with an animal. Every effort will be made by Dr. Abbate to reduce the risk of zoonosis
6. Direct contact with the animal’s urine, stool, and/or blood should be avoided. Every effort will be made by Dr. Abbate to educate/model for the patient and/or guardian appropriate ways to physically engage with Peanut
7. All patients must either wash their hands, use hand sanitizer or sanitizing wipes before and after touching Peanut
8. Peanut will be well groomed before every therapy session. Although every effort will be made to cut and file Peanut’s nails, scratching may occur while physically interacting with the dog. Neither Dr. Abbate, nor the Melmed Center, can be held liable for injuries incurred by Peanut’s nails.
9. Dogs play or show affection by licking or nibbling, which may result in oral contact from the dog. Although every effort will be made by Dr. Abbate to monitor this, there is a risk for light biting or zoonotic disease transmission to occur when a dog makes oral contact with a person. Peanut will be allowed to lick the patient upon obtaining the patient’s and/or guardian’s verbal permission. This will be noted in the patient’s file.
Neither Dr. Abbate, nor the Melmed Center can be held liable for injury or zoonotic disease transmission as a result of oral contact from Peanut.

10. Dogs use their body to communicate and may brush against or lean into a person. Other body language such as tail wagging or body wiggling may also occur. Such behaviors create a risk for loss of balance, falling, or light bruising. Neither Dr. Abbate, nor the Melmed Center can be held liable for injury incurred by physically engaging with Peanut.

11. The patient and/or guardian will promptly report all accidents and/or injuries to Dr. Abbate. Should injury occur, Dr. Abbate will respond accordingly and take proper action to help the patient get the appropriate medical care.

12. Peanut cannot be used in therapy without Dr. Abbate present. No other provider, unless credentialed and previously approved by Dr. Abbate, can handle or use Peanut in a therapeutic capacity.

13. Patients are never to be left alone with Peanut.

14. If at any time, Peanut shows signs of distress, irritation, fear, or in any way acts in a negative manner, she will be allowed to take a break. No one, except Dr. Abbate, should touch or interact with Peanut during these times. Dr. Abbate will assess and determine whether it is safe for Peanut to return to the session.

15. Animals, like people, have their own moods that determine their level of desire to interact with others. It is therefore understood that Peanut is allowed to determine if and when to participate in therapy/interact with others. While it may be planned to use Peanut in a scheduled therapy session, Peanut will never be forced to interact should she indicate signs of distress and/or resistance.

16. Peanut has a designated space in the office where she is free to rest, sleep, or take a break without interruption.

17. If Dr. Abbate and the patient agree, Peanut may work off leash, which will be noted in the patient’s file.
